posed has been pending for nearly three years. Perhaps if it had been passed two years ago, before the outbreak in Korea a year ago, there would have been no Korean war. I have substantiation for that statement. . . .

The plan to federate the free people of the world, beginning with the signatories of the Atlantic Pact is, to my mind, our best chance for establishing peace for all time. In addition, as I have indicated I think it would deter the Soviet Union from any further aggression while our representatives explored the possibilities.

But the resolution we have proposed is a calm procedure. It does only this:
